DEDICATION

Dedicated to every client I have ever had: from seekers to skeptics, and everyone in between. Without your participation over the past decades, this book would not exist.

To those just starting on the road of Enlightenment: you are very welcome indeed! There is always room for more folks at the Party of Life.

But most of all, to the late great Allie Cheslick, “Chatty Cathy of the Dead” and the best medium I’ve ever known. You predicted this book, dear friend—and here it is.

*“With so many pretenders and Trained-In-A-Weekend ‘Experts’ in the psychic field, it can be difficult to know who is the real deal. Following the practical and sage advice in The Psychic Yellow Brick Road eases the mind and heart, so it no longer becomes a trial-and-error experiment in ‘Is this the right one?’ When you can determine the proper questions to ask and how to follow through on what you learn, you will unerringly find the right person to walk with you on Life’s Learning Road.”*

– CHRISTINE ALEXANDRIA, Angel Intuitive and award-winning inspirational author (Askfirmations, Angel Chatter, and Have You Ever Wondered About Angels?)

"While psychic development books are plentiful, it's rare to find a volume specifically dedicated to the person who wants to work with a psychic, rather than become one themselves. The Psychic Yellow Brick Road is smart, sensible, and doesn't fly over the reader's head with jargon and hyperbole. Instead, it clearly explains why working with an intuitive counselor is a useful method for identifying challenges and gives you new tools to surmount them. We've needed a "field guide" like this for a long time!"

– STACI WELLS, Psychic Medium, Medical Intuitive, Numerologist, and Principal Soul Plan Psychic in Your Soul's Plan, and Your Soul's Gift, specializing in Karma and Pre-Birth Planning Readings

"Corbie Mitleid writes with clarity and candor... rather than cluttering a complex topic with innuendo or vagaries, she concentrates on presenting the essential tenets to understanding the world of the psychic/intuitive. The Psychic Yellow Brick Road is a must-read for beginners in the metaphysical arena, students who want to learn to do readings as eventual professionals, and anyone who wants or needs a thorough, lively but gentle key to opening the door to the mysteries that are 'Out There.'"

ENLIGHTENMENT IS FOUND IN QUESTIONS NOT ANSWERS

Can you tell me what my soul's plan was for this life? What lessons am I to learn? What is my higher purpose, my mission, and how do I do it?

- Caroline

People come to intuitives for answers—about their love lives, their finances, their children, their parents, their futures. And often about the Huge Questions of Life, the Universe and Everything. At the same time, the majority of my clients don't know how to ask the right questions.

Let me explain why some questions aren't appropriate and why some questions lose their value if a psychic were to answer them, regardless of what the answer might be.

When I receive questions like the ones above (and these constitute 60 percent of what I'm asked), I know we're starting on the wrong track. While it's valid to want to learn about such things in order to complete life challenges, these questions are too all-encompassing, and not something an intuitive ought to tackle. Why? Because figuring out our soul's plan/lessons/mission is part of our life's journey. And to ask an intuitive "what's the plan" as if the intuitive could explain the entire thing in an hour is neither feasible nor useful. Would you be able to tell me everything about your life since birth—in detail—in 60 minutes?

Even if I could do a multi-hour session without exhausting myself (or you!), I would be doing a disservice to you to dispense this monumental and vast cache of information without giving you the chance to explore, learn on your own, or piece things together. And that dismisses the entire reason you set yourself these challenges in your pre-birth planning session. We come down to Earth deliberately forgetting our unity and our complete plan in order to recreate/reconstruct it through our experiences. That's what's valuable. That's the precious treasure we bring back Home when we transition after a life filled with learning, understanding and sharing.

If you can trace a clear pattern of behavior or occurrences and want to know why the pattern repeats, how to stop it, or how it serves you—and those questions key us into an important challenge—then that's valid to review. Such information can lead to vast improvements in the quality of your life and your road to Self. But merely asking “What am I to learn? What is my plan?” is like expecting your professor to let you look at the answers before you go into your exam. How much would you really learn? And how much would you treasure those answers so easily gotten?

Let's look at some appropriate questions for a session that seeks to unblock challenges. You'll note sometimes it's a very succinct query, and sometimes it takes a little detail to flesh out, but they are always about a single focus:

- Am I supposed to write a book? Why do I constantly feel like I am supposed to do something related to writing?

- Why do I seem to constantly diminish my creative talents in favor of more commercial activities? How can I stay true to my vision yet survive financially?
- Alcohol has always played a role in my life (first father's addiction, then taken on by me at the time of his death). What looks like a character weakness on my part, can it actually be serving a higher purpose?
- Recently I have become interested in Energy Medicine courses and am wondering if it's the right direction for me in terms of added education that can improve my ability to help those I work with as well as my own spiritual growth and physical healing. I have a deep soul urging to learn things to help myself and my clients, but I want to make sure I'm taking the course that best fits with my purpose in this lifetime.
- There is an ongoing issue with my husband and me. Sexual energy has not been there—and never was—and for some reason, this has become an issue for me since I've gotten older. I've suppressed this for years and have been looking at it over the last few years in relation to my health and as part of my spiritual development. I know you can't tell me to leave or to stay. But if you could help me to understand what purpose is being served by this relationship, that would be helpful to me.

In these questions, each client has identified a stumbling block that appears to have some duration. So, looking at how to clear the block moves their life energy forward—not only in the challenge they pinpoint, but also in many tangential areas of their lives. In other situations, they might note a pattern of desire: service through healing, the inspirational life, or the need to create something beautiful, purposeful, or enlightening.

Remember, too, that to address every single challenge in your life (near-death experiences, a traumatic relationship with your mother, a challenging love relationship, why you can't have children, etc.) would overwhelm both of us. All of these occurrences can spark deep questions deserving sufficient time for investigation and settling the energies of the answer within your own emotional and spiritual purview. To expect to get and incorporate a mountain of important and emotionally charged answers from one session is asking for failure—and a heck of a headache.

So, how do you ask the right Major Life questions?

FIRST: Take some time for self-examination in order to form the questions. Do you have a repeating pattern, a stumbling block, something that always trips you up no matter what you do around it?

Is there a part of your life that means a great deal to you (career, relationships, security) that you need to improve in a deep manner?

SECOND: Note how long the need for answers has been with you. Has it been building gradually, or was it triggered by a person, event, or internal epiphany?

THIRD: Make sure you are completely ready to hear whatever the intuitive has to say regarding the answer. As always, they may not tell you what you want to hear (“Yes, you were meant to be a great ballerina.”), but what you need to hear (“Movement is vital for you, but more in terms of Tai Chi or yoga than performance art.”).

The determining of one’s life path and incarnational mission is central to our flowering as a pathway to joy, service and completion. But in this case, the journey is the most important aspect of your road—not the destination. Take your time with it...savor it...put your heart into the journey. And what you will gain is not a simple answer, but a beacon to light up all the roads here in Earthschool on which you find yourself traveling.
